Freedom and Democracy for Everyone

In America, we don't have kings. That means leaders can't just make up rules, take away people's rights, or put themselves above everyone else. Together, we can build a country where everyone has freedom and feels safe.

You're never too young (or too old!) to care about fairness and help make things better. See more at:

In the picture is Frederick Douglass, a man who escaped slavery and became one of America's strongest voices for freedom. He gave speeches and wrote books that showed the truth about slavery and demanded that our country lives up to its promise of liberty and equality. Douglass believed that every person deserves dignity and the power to shape their own future.
